INTRODUCTION

The prime objectives of feminism are hypothesizing by attaining equality against patriarchal dominance. Feminism has developed during 20th century; it started with the anticipation of succeeding the equality in all sorts of opportunities, through the movements all over the world. It is also a moral fight by having philosophical thoughts and ideologies. 20th century was the major milestone participation of women in all the fields. Gender equality and Women rights are deliberately considered as significant marks all over the world, In India feminism also has been struggling for the same global causes. In India, the scenario is slight dissimilar when it comes to the issues of women conditions in comparison to western thoughts of feminism. Because the nature of the Indian society is not complied in single form, there are some evident of Matriarchal families too. The society was classified into four major categories like, Brahmin at the top, followed by Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra. Accordingly the status of women belonging to these caste based categories too notably dissimilar. Consequently comparison of the western thoughts cannot be generalized in the understandings of Indian Feminism. There are plentiful problems are still in deliberation, discriminations and the Women victimizations are seriously harmful to the society. The historical condition of Women through the ages was not significantly appraised in noble terms. There was various social evils hollowed dominated the society with superstitious believes. This remained until the European colonialist thinkers and the administrators condemned. This significant development is the first major steps in strengthening the status of women in the early India. Education system was reformed and as modern thoughts started developing in the minds of people, the orthodox norms were made new dimension by abolishment of Social Evils. In ancient India the condition of women was considerably decent. Women used to participate in all the Social gathers, Festivals, Social Celebrations, and Education etc. So mostly respectable and the conditions were good. Victimization can be categorized in these following factors.

Religious canonical: The ancient Indian historically was dominated by the Religious practices. Almost all the things were measured through some Religious view. But, the victimizations were within these practices. Such are,

- Discrimination in Rituals- Widow Women Participations in Rituals was abolished, still today some of the Hindu women are never allowed to participation. This discrimination imposed worst, if these kinds of participation were subjected to ban or abusive, sometimes it was abusive to whole family she belongs.
- Confined only for the services- Women mostly confined with the four walls, she could manage all sorts of hygienic in the house, cooking and other service like domestic works were enforced only on women.
- Dowry- The Dowry system is paying some amount of money or other sources of wealth in the form of gift, or property to the bridegroom. There were adequate cases are registered every day even till the date. This is one of the social evil in Indian Societies.
- The Menstruation Period – This is sensitive issue that the Hindu traditional followers still they believe this is impurity, the females were sent out of the house to the other places like sheds or form houses were they are not allowed to enter house. After completion of the period they have to enter house with some rituals of purifications. This is an absolute discrimination on women for victimizing her in the name of ritual and practices. Above all the factors clearly indicates the Women victimization in ancient India.

WOMEN VICTIMIZATION IN MEDIEVAL INDIA

In the medieval period of Indian History is has witnessed changing dimensions in political, religious and socio-culturally. This era is supposed to be “the Real Dark Age” for Women. There were so many social evils were practiced. Conditions of Women were very horrible and brutal. The society was dominated by the Superstitious believes and offensive actions. This era is most panic-stricken in history of India.

Victimization due to the social customs, practices, was affected whole society. This remained until the European Colonialist administrators made restriction, and also the reformation of religious practices were criticized by the native Hindu Philosophers and reformist. Education for Women was not merely encouraged. Such practices are

The practice of Sati: This is considered to be most horrible practice in the medieval period of Indian History. Widow woman was forced to death on the pyre of husband in funeral. This was practiced among Hindu Women, in order to sacrifice their life to the credit of husband to prove the loyalty. This is the real evidence of Patriarchies dominance of those days, and the victimization of the societal practices.

The Dowry system was also very prominently practiced.

During Wars: Whenever the Hindu Dynasties were attacked by the invaders the women used to arrange for mass pyre to die, in order to escape from the invaders. Women were afraid of their renown and loyalty only for their husbands. War Crimes were highly brutal.

Child marriages were common: Usually the minor girl’s marriage was commonly practiced, either by forcible or by traditionally. There was no moral conscience of the maturity, even today this is a social problem in India. There were no any chances to the girls to go against the society due to lack of awareness or maturity. Widows were forced to look ugly by removing their hair and eyebrow, forced to have foods without any spices and salt.

DevadasiSystem: This is a social problem, “Women herself dedicates to the services in the name of God”. This was almost misused in the terms of sexual Services by the authorities of the temples and people. This system practiced in the southern part of India, in the states Northern part of the Karnataka, Some part of Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu, And in Maharashtra. Also the parents forcibly marry the daughters to the deity of the god, when girl reaches to the puberty she should’ve served the upper caste communities. Once she marries the god, she had no chance to get into real marriages. God is considered as her Husband. These kinds of practices are evident of Women condition and the discrimination and also enslave her to the prostitution.

IMPACT OF WOMEN VICTIMIZATION IN MEDIEVAL PERIOD OF INDIAN HISTORY

Impact of women victimization can be analyzed with multi factor’s causations. The society condition was prime cause for those practices. The traditional values and orthodox practices used to control the whole society, even today there are many instances of social evils can be witnessed. It’s crime to go against the societal norms; women were confined with norms which is clear indication that whole society was victimized women.

- Education: The Education was not much remarkable during medieval period; there was restriction among Hindu religion and the Muslim religions. There were no instances of girls going for education, even there was restriction to the women to not to go out of the houses. “Purdah” was another practice, that women should cover her face by wearing some saree or other cloths. Education was encouraged during ancient period of India society, but in the Medieval period it was not carried and opportunities were blocked by conservatives. Lack of Education and awareness was causation for the Women Victimization.
- Socio- Cultural Values: The socio-culturally Indian history is very rich, Indian people were more loyal in such celebrations. Whenever the social celebrations celebrated, the participation of every people was so committed. The values were followed very strictly even today. Indian People are well known for their traditional values and the practices. So this was another reason for the women Victimization in the shadow of socio-cultural influence. If people go against it, they were banned from the society for specific period without help of other people.
- Religious rule and law’s: Indian history provides the significantly the Law and Legislations of early India. The Early developments were milestones of the religious laws of Saint Manu “ManudhramaShasthra”. Its set of rules and regulations of diverse roles of different people, status of the society, caste orientated roles of the people, and the Punishments. This law remained until the establishment of unified code for whole India by the British Administrators. Even the same case with the Muslim communities followed their own laws.

FEMINIST INTERVENTIONS AGAINST WOMEN VICTIMIZATION IN INDIA

Promising Efforts of Feminist Approach in the Prevention of Women Victimization

- Legislation: The efforts through the Feminist approaches and the movements will influence in the creation of laws in the interest of women perspective. Nowadays lots of efforts are made to create awareness. Recent example of protests made significant for recent amendment of Nirbhaya law in India is such a venture. Feminist writers and thinkers are more active in order to achieve the needy process.
- Feminist Movements in societal changes: Now the societal acceptance is changing dimensions all over the world, it is very much of promising efforts and also significant in conveying the better solutions. Feminist movements are also convincing in social changes.
- Feminist movements through social networking are faster in reaching the people, it is well establish mode to create attention among people. It works has one of the best action to bring social awareness.
- Establishment of organizations and governmental initiation is one of the best activities to promote issues like gender sensitivity.

Role of feminist activism: The feminism in India is rising in its trends, more women participation in the social needs and causes, especially with the objective of strengthening women and to prevent the social evils with more importance. This is good sign in the development of Women activism; it would seek attention from all the dimensions. It has much importance in the country like India, where Women participation is needy in regional setups.

CONCLUSIONS

In India, feminist movements are attentive towards the progressive developments of the nation especially towards old-fashioned patriarchies and developments exclusively in socio – economic dimensions, political stagnations. It is challenging in the Indian diversify conditions, stratified with various religious interference, caste are effecting the progressive nature. After the milestone of establishing the democratic influenced Nirbhaya law amendment to the Indian Penal Code, the attention towards women victimization is drastically influenced in India. Now the probable ways for the feminists approach is to emphasis their knowledge on legal enforcements, legislative authorities in order to make effective influence and to convey morality among people in the prevention of offences against women and to care women victims with good advocacy.
